Prefatory Note.

In this Volume I have collected all documents referring to the actual course of the Mutiny. The series begins with May 1857 and closes with April 1858, when the actual disturbance was over so far as the Punjab was concerned. The sequelæ last far beyond that date. It was many years before all references to the Mutiny disappeared from our Press Lists. So late as 1862, for example, there are references in the Judicial Department to the trial and punishment of rebels. The compensation claims again occupy an entire section in the Record Office and will be dealt with at a later date. Many of them were calculated on the generous lines of "Don Pacifico" and were suitably reduced by Sir R. Temple who was placed on special duty in this connection.

To return to the Mutiny records themselves. Many of them have already been printed in the 'Mutiny correspondence' published by the Punjab Government in 1911. Others have not and some of them are of particular interest as the personal experience of individuals—official and non-official—during the great crisis. A large number of the documents are telegrams and while reading them one cannot fail to realise what a mercy it was that, thanks to Lord Dalhousie, we possessed a Telegraph system in the Punjab in 1857. But for this matters might have become very much more serious. It was not a time for lengthy letter writing. In its earlier stages the Mutiny was handled by John Lawrence from Murree and from Rawalpindi and nothing is more striking than the celerity with which a decision is arrived at. The short, curt order with "J. L." scrawled underneath settles the question and solves the difficulty.

Further than this one is struck by the resourcefulness and promptitude of the District Officers. There were many little disturbances in the Punjab in 1857, which in many cases were not of sufficient importance to find their way into the official history. That they spread no further was due to the energy of the local authorities. Failures there were, but not many of them.

One of the most remarkable facts is the way in which punitive forces were improvised. A local Mutiny breaks out. John Lawrence is notified at once and, usually in the same telegram, the Deputy Commissioner concerned mentions that he is starting in pursuit of the Mutineers—his force probably consisting of police, and armed volunteers.

The Delhi telegrams are of particular interest. John Lawrence was daily kept informed as to the progress of the siege and it is difficult even to-day to read without emotion the short messages which tell of the assault and of the death of Nicholson.

			December 1858.
1	No. 4979, dated 4th December 1858. From—G. F. Edmonstone, Esquire, Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department. To—Sir J. Lawernce, Bart. K. C. S., Chief Commissioner, Punjab.	Final orders of Government of India on the question of the responsibility for guaranteeing the lives of other members of the Delhi Royal family the Ex-King and the imputation against local officers of delay and leniency in dealing with offenders.	With reference to letter No. 82, dated the 12th December 1857, the Secretary to the Government of India sends the Chief Commissioner, Punjab, copy of a letter addressed to Mr. C. B. Saunders, Commissioner, Delhi, and adds that the Governor-General is of opinion that the letter of 12th December 1857 contains a complete refutations of the imputations that appeared in the "Friend of India" of the 19th November 1857, a delay on the part of the local officers at Delhi in the prosecution of offenders and of under leniency in dealing with them the letter from the Government of India to the Commissioner, Delhi, explaining that the papers were allowed to lie over in the expectation that a further explanation as to the guarantee given of their lives to others of the Delhi Royal family than the Ex-King himself might be received from Captain Hodson. Subsequently Captain Hodson's death. No less than Sir A. Wilson's departure from the country and consideration connected with that officer's difficult position at Delhi at the time when the life of the Ex-King was guaranteed made it both invidious and unnecessary to discuss the question of the responsibility of the guarantee. The Governor-General now records his opinion that Captain Hodson had no authority from Sir A. Wilson for guaranteeing the life of Zeenut Mahal, of her son Jumna Bakht, and her father Ahmad Koleh Khan. The Governor-General is of opinion that Mr. Saunders had no share in the matter and is in no way responsible for the act. Adds that Mr. Saunders is exonerated from the imputation made in the "Friend of India" of having desired to do honour to Jumna Bakht and his explanations on the subject are deemed satisfactory.
